THE IMPORTANCE OF THE SCIENTIFIC PRESENTATION ISS (Internacional Standard Serial Number)

The ISSN - International Standard Serial Number (International Standard Serial Number) is the internationally accepted identifier to individualize the title of a serial publication, making it unique and definitive. Its use is defined by the International Technical Standards of the International Organization for Standardization ISO 3297.

The ISSN is operated by an international network and, in Brazil, the Brazilian Institute of Information in Science and Technology - IBICT acts as the National Center of this network.

The ISSN identifies the title of a serial publication (newspapers, magazines, yearbooks, reports, serial monographs, etc.).

The ISSN consists of eight digits, including the control digit, and is represented in two groups of four digits each, joined by a hyphen, always preceded by a space and the initials ISSN.

Example: ISSN-e 2412 and ISSN 0256-6419, FIEP BULLETIN identifier

Publishers interested in registering their serials can obtain the ISSN application form and instructions on the home page <http://cbissn.ibict.br/index.php/solicitar-issn>, or request it from the Brazilian ISSN Center, IBICT.
